

Inglewood Community Nursery and Infant School History Vision

At Inglewood Infant school, we aim to spark curiosity and a love of learning about the past through an engaging and meaningful history curriculum. We begin with what is most familiar, starting with the children's own memories and experiences, before exploring the lives of their families, community, and significant people from the past.

Through carefully chosen, memorable topics, we ensure the children develop a secure sense of chronology and can positively recall and build on previous learning. Our approach nurtures skills of enquiry, observation, and critical thinking, enabling pupils to ask questions, make connections, and develop a coherent understanding of history in Britain and the wider world. By laying these strong foundations, we empower our young learners to see themselves as historians, equipped to explore the past with curiosity, empathy, and confidence.
